

Professional Learning Videos

This series of videos has been prepared by VATE to support teachers as we all work remotely. The ideas and activities in each session target specific areas of need highlighted by our members. Many of the strategies contained in the sessions are adaptable to all secondary year levels and also to a return to 'regular programming' – whenever that may come.

Teaching independent text study

Ernest Price provides strategies for leading students in independent text study, particularly in a remote context. Ernest shares his experience with working with students to choose and analyse texts that engage their interest and meet their needs.

Ernest is the VATE Education Officer. He has previously been the Head of English at Werribee and Hoppers Crossing Secondary Colleges and the Head of Years 7 and 8 at Richmond High School

Providing feedback online

Sara Tacey provides evidence-based tips for how to effectively provide feedback while teaching remotely. Sara shares her extensive experience and examples of her approach.

Sara is the Head of English at Virtual School Victoria, the largest secondary school in Victoria. Sara is an experienced provider of remote education and has worked with academics to investigate the efficacy of various feedback frameworks.

Teaching EAL/D in a remote environment

Allie Baker provides tips and strategies to help teachers plan engaging, inclusive lessons that cater for the diverse needs of EAL/D learners. The session will support teachers to: deliver clear instructions; predict where EAL/D learners may have difficulties; improve students' speaking and listening; and ensure that students continue to develop their vocabulary, all in the virtual classroom.

Allie teaches at Wodonga Senior Secondary School and is devoted to improving the classroom experience of students with high literacy needs and passionate about sharing strategies that teachers can immediately implement in their own classrooms.

Analysing and presenting argument

Ernest Price outlines a range of strategies for teaching analysing and presenting argument. The learning activities embedded in the sessions can be adapted for all secondary year levels and both remote and on-site teaching.
